ABOUT THE COVER:

Children affected by emergencies in the Philippines are expressing themselves and their thoughts through artwork.

In 2020, Save the Children Philippines implemented adaptive and innovative strategies to respond to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and continue to pursue its ambition for every child to survive, learn, and be protected. CHAIR AND CEO MESSAGE

Helping children has always been an advocacy close to my heart that I am most passionate about. In 2020, I have been given the privilege to lead the wonderful Save the Children Philippines as its newest Board of Trustees Chair which I consider an honor and responsibility.

Though I am no stranger to Save the Children, I was welcomed warmly despite the challenges brought about by the COVID-19 pandemic which all of us have been bravely facing together. Thankfully, amid the profound upheaval of 2020, Save the Children Philippines has remained committed to its fundamental purpose of securing children's rights and helping all children achieve their full potential - no matter what it takes.

In line with this, the Membership Strategy Plan of Save the Children Philippines that we developed proved to be our guiding light to keep us on track as we have defined new strategies that would move us forward to becoming a regular member of Save the Children Association. This will allow us to continue to evolve and remain relevant as a stronger voice for children in the Philippines.

True enough, the complexities and adversities of the COVID-19 pandemic did not deter us in driving and delivering high-quality programs and services to achieve the global breakthroughs for children. Our hard work paved the way to Save the Children's strengthened technical reputation of being the foremost children's rights organization in the country and an agile and financially sustainable organization.

The foundational values of accountability, ambition, collaboration, creativity and integrity drive long-term success for our company, as well as for all the children and communities we serve.

These and the many other accomplishments we achieved together in 2020 connect directly to the passionate and talented staff of Save the Children Philippines who made strides to make things happen together with our partners in the government, civil society, private sector, and all our stakeholders.

Along with the entire Board, I have always valued how Save the Children Philippines rises up to meet every challenge and opportunity. We thank everyone for taking your dedication to new heights.

It is my honor to share with you the Save the Children Philippines 2020 Annual Report that celebrates the impact of our work for and with children. May it inspire you to join us in our quest to improve the way the world treats children and in bringing immediate and lasting positive change in their lives.

Margarita Delgado
Chairman
Save the Children Philippines

It is a fact that 2020 was one of the most difficult years we have ever faced and many of the challenges it has brought about remain with us to this day. We are now in the "new normal," and with no clear end in sight to the COVID-19 pandemic, we may stay here for a few more years.

But despite the situation, we did not back down on our commitment to the children of the Philippines.

Through innovation, creativity, and the tireless dedication of our staff, we rose above the challenges of the pandemic and delivered interventions to ensure that children can still enjoy their rights to survival, education, and protection.

At the start of quarantine measures in the country, we disseminated information materials through various channels to give children and their families knowledge on how to protect themselves against COVID-19.

We gave children access to quality learning materials from the safety of their home through Project ARAL (Access to Resources for Alternative Learning), which was built on the success of our other efforts on children's education.

We continued to engage in legislative and policy advocacy to protect children against all forms of abuse, despite the pandemic. And we were among the first to respond to the needs of the affected population during emergencies such as the Taal Volcano eruption and Typhoons Rolly and Ulysses.

The impact of these interventions, along with our other programs, are detailed in this report, which we hope you take pleasure in reading. But while we have achieved many successes in 2020, now is definitely not the time to ease up on our efforts.

There is still much to be done to secure a bright and better future for the children of the Philippines. We assure you, however, that our work will be in full force for 2021 and beyond. We will be adapting new strategies and innovations to keep up with the times, all to make sure that we can deliver the needs of children, especially those most impacted by poverty, discrimination, and other forms of social exclusion.

We thank you for your continued support for our work. Because of your help, we were able to reach 3.4 million people in 2020, including more than 1 million children. The difficulties we face can sometimes be overwhelming, but we will continue to give our best to give children the quality of life that they deserve.

We hope you remain by our side as we aim to reach even more in 2021—a milestone year for us, as we celebrate the 40th anniversary of our presence in the Philippines. This year, we are ramping up our efforts on all fronts: from programming to business development to advocacy and communications. Our aim is to make Save the Children known as a leader in children's rights, and with your support, we are sure that we can definitely achieve this goal.

On behalf of the children of the Philippines, we thank you, and we look forward to achieving more successes with you.

CHILDREN AND FAMILIES WERE PROVIDED WITH ACCESS TO HEALTH INTERVENTIONS

In 2020, despite the pandemic, we ensured that the most vulnerable children, adolescents, and parents/ caregivers, including expectant mothers and babies, received care and have access to health information and services, medical care facilities, food and micronutrient supplements, and social protection programs. We worked closely with health and nutrition service providers and local government units (LGUs) in rural and urban program areas, as well as the national government to strengthen policies and systems for children. And we worked with adolescents, their families, and communities to ensure that young people's particular health needs are met.

- Nurturing Care in the First 1000 Days (NURTURE)
- Heart to Healthy, Empowered, and Responsible Teens (Heart to HEART)

10 community savings group members met their food needs during the COVID-19 lockdown through the integration of savings as a safety net

No deaths reported among maternal, newborn, infant and under-5 children in program areas

"I am Merlina, 26 years old and a mother of three children - Timothy, 6, Feliza, 5 and Aldrin Jr., three months old. I am also breastfeeding my youngest son. We have been staying here in this housing site for almost a year already. I live with my husband Aldrin, my three kids and my sister Martina, 30 who has mental disability.

Before I gave birth, I used to sell rags at the public market of Tanay and my husband is a construction worker in Laguna. Because of the quarantine, my husband's work was temporarily stopped.

I am happy that I am able to successfully breastfeed Aldrin Jr., aside from it being very practical, I have been told by health workers here that it is also healthy for my baby.

I am happy that we are able to receive these food packs and family hygiene kits (from Save the Children) because right now, we really don't have money and fear that we will run out of money to buy food.

I am also thankful for the hygiene essentials because with whatever we have, we would always prioritize buying food and will have nothing left to buy for (sanitizing) alcohol or even a mask."

1,348,928 REACHED TO SUPPORT CHILDREN AND YOUTH IN THEIR CONTINUED LEARNING DURING THE PANDEMIC AND EMERGENCIES

Save the Children Philippines embarked on adaptive learning programs and worked closely with the Department of Education (DepEd), and local government units (LGUs) together with teachers and education stakeholders, for the implementation of the Basic Education Learning Continuity Plan (BE-LCP) and COVID-19 Response Plans. The multi-sectoral approach enabled continued learning and development, and safety and wellbeing of all children, as well as utmost safety of the students, including children with disabilities, children living in far-flung areas, children of indigenous families, out-of-school children and youth, and other children most impacted by inequality and discrimination.

"I really miss going to school in my uniform, and to read and write. Now, I'll be able to study and use the learning kit Save the Children gave me for my online learning. This is a big help for us."

- Jaslene,
10 years old

Teacher Claudine and her Special Education (SpEd) students were greatly affected by the closure of schools in 2020 due to the pandemic. But they are grateful because they will be able to continue their online distance learning through the OPPO A12e smartphones and Rock Space Torch Bluetooth Earphones they received from Philippine Oppo Mobile Technology that gladly responded to Save the Children Philippines' Project ARAL (Access to Resources for Alternative Learning) - our flagship COVID-adapted Education Program that aims to provide children from vulnerable communities access to quality and inclusive resources for continued learning.

"We had a virtual orientation on how modular learning will be done... You really have to do everything and explore all means. This is not a normal problem because of the pandemic."

For Special Education students, they need immediate feedback. They need an individualized approach. However, parents are not trained to that. If the foundation and follow-ups within the home are not that strong, regression will increase."

KASALI Project wins 2020 global award for Innovative Education Programming

Krystel is one of the 78,000 children reached by Save the Children's KASALI (Education for All Children) Project whose story remains an inspiration to all.

She was diagnosed with "Global Developmental Delay" but through the interventions of the KASALI Project, her family learned how to help in her learning, as well as in her physical growth and development.

Krystel has greatly improved since the first day of school. Now, she actively participates in class, and even mutters sounds and syllables. She too, can stand on her own and make small steps.

"Krystel is very happy in class. We had a class picture just recently and she was driving away her mother because she wanted to be in the photo with just her classmates," said her teacher Adoracion.

Carlo, 18, is a child in conflict with the law (CICL) charged with a drug-related case. He is staying in Bahay Pag-asa (temporary shelter). According to Carlo, the COVID-19 pandemic and quarantine restrictions affected their court hearings and delayed the scheduled release of some CICL. His court hearings were on hold for four months since the announcement of lockdown in March, until online court hearings started in May.

“I felt sad when I learned about the 122 children deaths in the anti-illegal drugs campaign because these children were not given a chance to live, be with their loved ones, and were robbed of their future,” Carlo shared.

In April 2020, Save the Children Philippines provided hygiene essentials to their rehabilitation center to help mitigate the risk of COVID-19. Children’s consultations and learning sessions on children’s rights with CICL were also facilitated in November and December.

“It is very important for children and youth like me to learn about our rights, be heard, and consulted. Through education, I can have a better future and be able to help my family once I get a job,” Carlo said.

Protecting Children in the Anti-Illegal Drugs Campaign (ProAct) is a project of Save the Children Philippines that aims to build stronger child protection systems, protect children from the adverse impacts of the anti-illegal drugs campaign, and promote nonviolence and respect for human rights at the national and local level.

“There should be a fair treatment to everyone, because we are all human,” Carlo added.

CHILD PARTICIPATION AND CHILD RIGHTS GOVERNANCE

53,589 REACHED TO EMPOWER
CHILDREN ON THEIR RIGHTS AND TO BE HEARD

Children were not spared from the impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic as well as the quarantine rules and guidelines imposed by the government which exposed them to unprecedented concerns on health, education, and protection. To ensure that they are able to survive and thrive in the new normal, Save the Children Philippines implemented programs which allowed children to participate and call for government and stakeholder action and accountability on pressing children's rights issues. This led to several local government units (LGUs) to adopt policies and/or plans of action incorporating children's concerns.

Save the Children Philippines' technical support and contributions enabled the Civil Society Coalition on the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC Coalition) to submit child rights monitoring reports to UN Human Rights bodies highlighting key issues affecting children's right to health, education, protection and participation (e.g. discrimination based on sexual orientation/gender identity and expression [SOGIE], and disability, impact of the anti-illegal drugs campaign on children, corporal punishment, OSAEC, child marriage, protection of children in situations of armed conflict, etc.). As part of Child Rights Governance, we supported the national government and LGUs in strengthening risk reduction mechanisms.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS IN OUR PROJECT AREAS

16 children and youth groups and a national children's coalition submitted reports and policy proposals on health, education, and protection concerns

11,831 barangays accessed the Quality Assurance System portal to improve the quality of their Barangay Disaster Risk Reduction and Management Plan (BDRRMP)

360 children and youth participated in a learning session on climate change

Both Ericka and Jeffrey belong to community-based children's groups that are members of a national coalition of children's organization called C2C (Children Talk to Children about the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child).

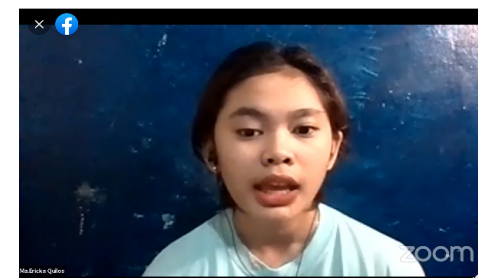

They were trained on how to monitor children's situation in their communities, to gather and analyze data on the experiences and views of children on key issues through interviews, mini-surveys, focus-group discussions and consultations, and to package their findings into key messages that they can use to advocate with government stakeholders at national and local levels.

After years of data gathering, Ericka and Jeffrey finally presented the "First Filipino Children's Report" and proudly represented C2C in a closed-door online children's dialogue with the members of the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child on October 5, 2020. They called on the world's governments to pass laws that would address different children's rights issues.

"We hope that through our report, the government will get to know and consider the possible solutions that children are recommending that will help put an end to some of the issues that we are facing as children. It is important that the president and others in the government see the importance of the data, recommendations and issues that we have presented on our report," said Ericka.

"We call on the government to open its mind to our report and study its content because this report went through a long process, and was carefully thought out by us children. It has valid data gathered directly from children, and we children are the only ones who have directly experienced these issues," added Jeffrey.

C2C was established in 2009 by Save the Children and partner civil society organization, the Samahan ng Mamamayan – Zone One Tondo, Inc. (ZOTO), as a venue for various children's organizations to come together to learn about children's rights and how to monitor how these rights are being implemented in their own communities.

Amalia is a mother of four who lives in a rural area in the province of Leyte. When she heard about the opportunity to be a volunteer facilitator for Save the Children, Amalia jumped at the chance. “I wanted to learn, to expand my knowledge about how to facilitate and face a crowd,” she said.

In this role, she learned new things about herself. “I realized that I am a mother who had many shortcomings towards my children,” she said. “I gave them food, took care of their schooling, provided their allowance, and I thought this was enough.”

Through the training sessions on Positive Discipline, Amalia gained a better understanding on the importance of cultivating an open relationship with her children. She learned that showing her children that she loved them by communicating even in simple ways like asking them how their day was, is as important as providing them with their everyday needs. This demonstrates a balance of both warmth and structure and can make the child more comfortable in sharing things like problems with their parents, which can lead to a closer and more understanding relationship between them.

This new way of parenting had such a profound effect on Amalia's eldest, Jonamae, and inspired her to become a volunteer facilitator like her mother. Amalia's advice to other parents: “It's not too late to change and show your children you love them.” She said that even if you don't have children, you could still apply these practices in dealing with children in your community. And this can help their development as adults.

Our media mileage strengthened our share of voice and secured our position among the top three leading children's rights organizations in the country in 2020. Meanwhile, our landmark increase in followers and engagements allowed us to reach a larger donor base that supported our adaptive programs and fundraising efforts for children's continued learning, survival, and protection during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Save the Children Philippines welcomes actress Ria Atayde as its latest Ambassador who will help promote children's rights on education and health, amid the continuing challenges of COVID-19.

“It is important for celebrities and ambassadors to use their voice and platforms for a greater cause. This role of helping our country's children gives more meaning to my life.” - Ria

FUNDRAISING

Heroes from Home

Many individuals heeded Save the Children Philippines' call to be "heroes from home" for children. The #HeroFromHome campaign launched in July 2020 encouraged individuals to create their own fundraisers, while staying safe in their own homes. The campaign supported children's educational needs during the time of pandemic. Donations collected went to Save the Children Philippines' COVID-19 response which includes the implementation of Project ARAL (Access to Resources for Alternative Learning).

The Enopia family from Imus, Cavite, started their own mobile cafe called "The Cooking Dad Bake & Brew" as a workaround to survive the pandemic. Since June, they have been donating 10% of their sales to Save the Children to help ensure that children can continue learning. Each family member has a role to play in this initiative with John Eric "The Cooking Dad" in charge of the baking, mommy Sheng taking care of purchasing and accounting, and their kids Shayne, 11, and Uno, 7, managing their monthly donations.

Through the support of our donors, we are able to provide children with the support they need. The Enopia family is a perfect example indeed that despite limitations, as long as you have the heart to create a lasting change for children, you can be a hero from home.

"We are excited to use the educational toys, storybooks, and other teaching materials from the Early Childhood Care and Development (ECCD) Kit, especially when face-to-face classes resume. But for now, we are bringing some of them during our home visits to our students. You can see our students' smiles and enthusiasm on how happy they are using the kits. I also like how the webinar helped us understand our mental and psychological wellbeing and how to manage our stress. It reminded us of our duty of protecting our learners from all forms of harm, abuse, and punishment."

- Teacher Aiza on her experience with Save the Children Philippines' six-month emergency response and recovery intervention that included provision of printers and printing supplies including ink and bond papers to the municipalities of Bato, San Andres, and Virac, Catanduanes.

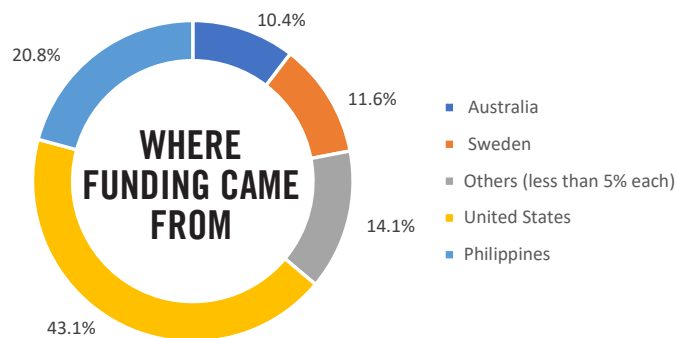

Rafrat, 15, was born with an orthopedic disability. He lives in a small community in the town of San Miguel in Catanduanes. Landslides and flash floods by Typhoon Goni destroyed most of the houses in the area, including the abaca plantation, which is the primary source of livelihood of the community, including their family. He recalls how 13 family relatives, whose houses were made of lightweight materials, stayed in their 10-square meter concrete house during the typhoon to seek shelter. They then stayed in evacuation centers as they were left homeless.

"I am grateful that our family is safe and we still have our house, but I am worried for my parents who no longer have any livelihood after the typhoon swept off the abaca plantation. I miss being able to meet and talk to my friends and classmates, and wonder how they are right now. Unlike other kids who get to play outside, I am stuck at home without any means of reaching out to them. I fear that most of them have been displaced by the typhoon." - Rafrat
